CES takes pride in presenting a complete portfolio of state-of-the-art security measures for domestic and business clients.

The business of security

With a client portfolio that includes Australia's largest corporations, Chubb Electronic Security (CES) is the provider of choice for big business. That's not a reputation we take lightly, but one we have earned over 100 years of continued commitment to designing systems tailor-made to the unique specifications of each of our clients, and providing each with the technical service and support necessary to ensure high quality performance and reliability.

Satisfied CES customers include: St. George Bank, Westpac Banking Corporation, ANZ Bank, retailers Coles Supermarkets, Bi-Lo, Woolworths and Red Rooster; mining giants BHP and MIM, Optus; Victoria's Translink and Men's Metropolitan Prison, and a number of high-security and government installations.

To meet such a variety of client requirements, CES takes prides in a commitment to providing leading-edge technology. Supplying clients with the equipment necessary to ensure essential early-warning of a potential incident or emergency takes time, and it's only after thorough consultation with each client that CES can determine the equipment necessary to design a fully integrated system that will provide complete safety and security for any budget.

CES has an expansive selection of the most sophisticated detectors, sensors, and control and communications systems on the market. Discriminating clients can choose from

- commercial, industrial and residential alarm systems (to detect unwanted intrusions)
- fully integrated alarm, access control and closed circuit television (CCTV) systems
- high-voltage barriers
- intercom systems, and
- perimeter systems

All come with a range of after-sales service such as routine and comprehensive preventative maintenance and 24 hour back to base monitoring.

Who goes there?

Access Control is an area of security in which CES excels. It's a crucial consideration for our clients, especially those in retail, banking, defence establishments, government bodies, and large corporations. Monitoring the movement of staff and customers is paramount for safety and security, and CES ensures that the design of each Access Control system can be fully integrated with other electronic functions, such as air-conditioning and lighting.

It's a team effort, and at CES we encourage clients to meet with architects, consultants and CES security specialists at the design stage. This collaboration guarantees that every security system we install meets the client specifications, and that the project is cost-effective and convenient.

A significant feature of each CES system is the Security Monitoring System. Should a break-in or emergency occur, CES will ensure designated personnel are sent to the site at your instruction, giving all clients the peace of mind of 24-hour surveillance.

Welcome

Since its formation more than 50 years ago, Chubb Protective Services (CPS) has progressed to a point whereby it is indisputably pre-eminent in the field of people security in Australia.

CPS's range of services has expanded dramatically over the years to accommodate the ever increasing diversity of clients' needs for security and safety services

Chubb Protective Services (CPS) has achieved clear industry leadership as a service provider by following six important principles, being:

Assessment and Evaluation of Client Needs

Effective solutions to problems can only be found when there is a comprehensive understanding and appreciation of the circumstances and environment under which the client operates. CPS's experience and expertise enables such assessments to be made with pinpoint accuracy.

Planning

Once the evaluation is completed a plan is devised to cater for the immediate needs of the Client and also to cope with any contingencies which could conceivably arise.

Implementation

The first step in implementation is in the selection of security personnel appropriate for the role required. The type of operative will vary according to such factors as the nature of the business or facility being protected, "The Climate of Security" the Client wishes to maintain, and the presence of complementary security and building management equipment being installed.

Training

CPS is dedicated to ensuring its personnel are thoroughly trained in all specific aspects involving duties at a client premises. Relieving staff are trained in these functions also in order that continuity of service is maintained due to the inevitable absences of assigned operatives, e.g annual leave, sickness. In addition to "job specific" training, many personnel are also trained in a wider range of security and safety aspects thereby providing job enrichment and enhancing their value to the client.

Re-evaluation of Needs

From time to time, factors, both internal and external, can impact upon security and safety conditions pertaining to a premises or facility. Hence, in the interests of continuous service improvement, CPS implements performance monitoring systems and conducts formal periodic service reviews to ensure that levels and procedures are appropriate at any given time.

Industry Leadership

The CPS management team is widely acknowledged as being "The Pathfinder" in the industry. It is generally recognised as being the key initiator of the competency based training standards currently in place. Similarly, it was through the efforts of this team that CPS was the first security personnel company in Australia to attain quality accreditation. Regarded as an industry pioneer, CPS is determined to continue proactively to advance our company and the industry in its quest for service excellence.

CPS prides itself upon its versatility and flexibility. It caters for client needs whether those needs exist for just a few hours or for an indefinite period. The versatility of the company is evidenced by the wide range of security assignments being constantly undertaken. Chubb Security officers will be found at major sporting venues, remote mining sites, key financial institutions, prestigious entertainment precincts, Australia's premier defence establishments, protecting public transport commuters, natural gas processing and distribution plants and high rise office buildings. This listing is by no means exhaustive.

CPS has the capacity to undertake unique and challenging projects of a complex nature, often with a minimum of lead up time to set up the operation. An example of this was the gun buy-back program which was initiated by the Victorian Government in the aftermath of the Port Arthur (Tasmania) massacre. The Department of Justice commissioned Chubb to set up a network which would facilitate the collection of all firearms which did not comply with what the citizen was permitted to retain under the altered legislation. 14 permanent collection points were established throughout the State. Chubb was required to staff each point with personnel responsible for data input, weapon valuation, "Make Safe" procedures and payment for surrendered firearms.

To provide some indication of the magnitude of the task, when the assignment ceased after 12 months, about 250,000 firearms had been collected with $108 million being paid out in compensation. The efficiency of the conduct of the assignment was acknowledged by Chubb receiving the ASIAL award for "Best Managed Project".

CPS is regarded as the preferred provider by many organisations because of its capacity to satisfy client needs irrespective of whether the task is mundane or complex, short term or long term.
